By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—A new move to save Ruth Snyder from the electric chair was launched today. Her attorney, Edgar Hazleton, has begun action in the Supreme Court here to force trial by jury of an insurance suit at which the woman slayer's testimony would be required.

Instead of Governor Alfred E. Smith's deciding whether Mrs. Snyder must die next week or the execution be postponed, this question would be transferred to Justice Aaron J. Levy of the Supreme Court.

Governor Smith has indicated that he will deny the pleas of Mrs. Snyder and her former paramour, Henry Judd Gray, for clemency. He showed coldness to the appeal that Mrs. Snyder was in the "twilight zone" of insanity and Gray did not know what he was doing when they killed the woman's husband, Albert Snyder, with a sashweight.

Gray is not involved in the new move to stay the execution.

Hazleton made application to have tried by jury the suit of the Prudential Insurance Company to cancel the $95,000 insurance on the life of the slain Albert Snyder. Mrs. Snyder is one of the defendants in the suit. He contends that her testimony is essential in determining if Snyder's obtaining such heavy insurance was contrived by Mrs. Snyder in anticipation of her murdering him and getting the money.

Justice Levy must decide whether Mrs. Snyder should be heard in open court. It is within his power to stay the execution until this is done or, on the other hand, he could order that her testimony be taken in Sing Sing Prison immediately.

One of the important questions involved is whether Mrs. Snyder's testimony is vital in the interests of the nine year old daughter, Lorraine, to whom she assigned the policies.

The insurance company is seeking to cancel the two policies on the ground that they were obtained, not by Snyder's desire but upon the suggestion and initiative of his wife, and because she had an ulterior purpose. Hazleton demands a jury trial because he contends that the principal issue is not of law but of fact as to whether Snyder had legal knowledge of the policies. He contends that the trial should take place as quickly as possible and before January 12, the date of her scheduled execution.

Hearing of the insurance suit would undoubtedly be a long drawn out affair, since numerous questions would have to be answered such as the following: Did Snyder ever apply for the insurance? Did he sign the original policies? Did he assent to the policies? Were the policies ever delivered to him? Did he ever pay any premiums on them?

Originally Mrs. Snyder was the sole beneficiary of the policies. She, however, assigned the money to her daughter, for whom the condemned woman's mother, Mrs. Josephine Brown, is guardian. Consequently, Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Brown and Lorraine are defendants in the insurance company's suit.

DODGE VICTORY SIX HAS FINE INNOVATIONS

Car, Long and Low in Appearance, Is Capable of High Speed

TO MEET WIDE DEMAND

DETROIT, Jan. 6.—After eighteen months of development work, Dodge Brothers, Inc., has officially announced the Victory Six, a passenger car containing a number of marked innovations. It is long and low in appearance, capable of sustained high speeds, and is priced from $1,045 to $1,170; the standard sedan selling at $1,095 f. o. b. Detroit.

Plans for 1928 at Dodge Brothers include the continuance of the Standard Four, equipped with 4-wheel brakes and priced at $875 for the sedan, and the Senior Six, priced at $1,595 for the sedan, in addition to the Victory Six. The Graham Brothers truck division, which has just completed the most prosperous year in its history, will continue to build commercial cars and trucks of five capacities: 2-ton, 1½-ton, 1-ton, ¾-ton and ½-ton.

"With this program," said President E. G. Wilmer, "the Dodge dealers are prepared to meet a wide range of the demand for automotive transportation. These three distinct classifications of passenger cars and five separate types of trucks fit into a high percentage of the public's requirements as indicated by the industry's total sales."

Tentative schedules for the year indicate that nearly three-fourths of Dodge Brothers passenger car production will consist of Victory models including a coupe at $1,045, a coupe with rumble seat at $1,095, a sedan at $1,095, a de luxe sedan at $1,170, and a de luxe brougham at $1,170.

Grilling tests during which more than 1,000,000 miles were rolled up by engineers in both experimental and actual-production models preceded the formal announcement of the Victory. Some of the test cars, on durability runs, were kept going on the highways until their speedometers showed over 100,000 miles; speed performances on the Indianapolis track demonstrated that the car was capable of maintaining nearly 70 miles an hour as an average in thousand-mile grinds. For months preliminary to the formal announcement, Victory Six models have been subjected to all sorts and conditions of roadwork in all parts of the United States; their drivers taking them 14,000 feet up mountains and far below sea level on western deserts.

Officials of the Dodge company state that the new car embodies several basic innovations in automotive construction and design. To provide road-holding qualities necessary for high speeds and at the same time to permit the low sweeping body lines dictated by fashion without sacrificing roominess or road clearance, Dodge Brothers is employing a design entirely new to the industry. The body and the chassis frame, in the Victory Six, are a single unit.

Because conventional sills and cross-members are done away with, the center of gravity is closer to the road and the over-all height of the car is about at the ordinary man's hatbrim. The low center of gravity and union of chassis and body are said to have a marked stabilizing effect, reducing side sway and adding greatly to riding comfort. The frame of the Victory Six chassis is so deep that no splash shields are necessary, thus eliminating a source of noise.

Further structural distinctiveness has been obtained by a novel type of body design, which might be described as a steel shell welded inside an outer

One Accident

ANOTHER ASKS $5,000

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 6.—Damage suits in which a total of $23,000 damage is asked, have been filed in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks county by six persons against James Hoey, of Easton.

The suits were started by Samuel B. Stilwell, of this borough, attorney for the plaintiffs. They were filed following an automobile collision on the Doylestown and Easton pike, near Pipersville, on August 28, 1927.

Minnie Kauffman, Henry Kauffman, Harry Cohen, Edward Lando, Samuel Lando and Ervin Kauffman, all of Philadelphia, are the plaintiffs who brought the suit.

Minnie Kauffman asks $5,000 damages and her husband, Henry, $1,000. In one of the suits, Harry Cohen, driver of the automobile in which the plaintiffs were riding, asks $5,000 damages in another suit. Edward Lando asks $5,000 and his father, Samuel, $1,000, in another suit. Ervin Kauffman asks $5,000 and his father, Henry, asks $1,000 in another suit.

In the statement of claim filed in the Prothonotary's office, it is alleged that Hoey, in an automobile, ran into the Cohen car, resulting in the injury to the occupants of the Cohen car.

Claiming that he sustained injuries that may be of a permanent nature, W. Frank Rumlfield, of Milford township, has started suit for $5,000 damages in the Court of Common Pleas, against David C. Boose, of 130 North Jefferson street, Allentown. The statement of claim avers that on November 11, 1927, the plaintiff was an occupant of a wagon going north on the Allentown and Philadelphia highway near the residence of R. R. Ritter, Milford township, and the defendant was going north, in the same direction, in an automobile, when the Boose car crashed into the Rumlfield wagon, throwing Rumlfield out and injuring him. Suit was filed by C. William Freed, of Quakertown, attorney for Rumlfield.

Bailey showed his last year's shooting ability by caging five two-pointers. Fegley ran second in the scoring being by making four field goals.

McClafferty was the best scorer for Immaculata, while Lake played best on the defense.

The best game of the evening was the closely fought game between the K. of C. and Leedom's, which finally ended up in a 27-24 win for the Knights.

Field goals were made by "Coggie" Coyle and Sackville in the closing minutes of the game.

The carpet makers' quintet held the edge in shooting during the first part of the first half, but during the latter part the "Casey" five scored three field goals in succession. The half ended in an eleven point tie.

"Shorty" Dugan replaced Patterson at the opening of the second half. He scored a field goal which gave Leedom's an edge. Then the Knights tied the score. Leedom's, by the fine play of Trot, scored two more double-deckers, but in the closing minutes the Knights braced up and scored the tying and winning points.

Will Employ About 75 Men
At the Beginning of Operations

It has been announced that the plant of the Keystone Screw Company, at Yardley, has been purchased by the Harry L. Hussman Refrigerator Company, of St. Louis. The western concern is regarded as one of the largest of its kind. It has been in business for 21 years.

According to the announcement, the company will manufacture a complete line of market equipment, which includes the Hussmann patented freezer display counters and coolers. C. H. Austin, regional sales director, and F. C. Becker, production manager, of the Hussmann Company, came from St. Louis, arriving yesterday, to begin the work of renovating the Yardley plant. The company's plans call for production by January 23.

It is expected that about 75 men will be employed immediately, consisting of cabinetmakers, wood mill hands, tanners, painters experienced on varnishing and rubbing, glaziers and up-fitters or trimmers, this number to be increased to 100 employees probably within the next 90 days.

Operating two plants in St. Louis, the company at present is employing 750 men. The company has 270 salesmen scattered throughout the United States.

With the addition of the Yardley plant, the company may be in position to handle an export trade. Formerly the eastern sales office was in Philadelphia.

The former Keystone Screw Company plant at Yardley, which has been acquired by the Hussmann corporation, contains a floor space of 35,000 square feet, plus ground area of 17 acres, thereby giving ample room for the company's anticipated growth. The entire building will be immediately occupied to capacity with machinery equipment, etc., installation of which begins at once.

With the exception of the departmental heads being brought from St. Louis, the list of employees will be drawn from Yardley and Trenton.

The sale of the Keystone Screw Company was made by Eastburn, Blanche & Hardy, of Bristol.

Bath Street Man Will Again Face Trial At Court

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 6.—Patrick Green, Bath street, Bristol, was held in the sum of $500 bail for action of the Grand Jury after a hearing before Justice of the Peace Irvin M. James, here, last night. Green is charged with subornation of perjury.

Green's arrest is an outgrowth of his trial at the December term of Court on the charge of selling intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes and upon which charge he was acquitted.

At the time of Green's arrest previous to his trial at the December Court he was given a hearing before Justice Kraft at Bristol on the charge on which he stood trial at court. At the trial before Justice Kraft, Donald Follin, Bath street, Bristol, testified that he had purchased liquor from Green.

When the case came up to court trial, Follin took the witness stand and told the jury that he had not purchased any liquor from Green, but that his mother had given it to him, and because he was mad at Green he had gone to the police and told them the story about Green.

Chief McGuckin again ordered the arrest of Green.

At the hearing last night before Justice James here, Follin said that his testimony given at court was wrong and that he had so testified because Green had told him that he would shoot him like a rat if he told the truth.

Mrs. Grace Follin, the boy's mother, testified last night that on the night of December 9th in the court house corridor Green had offered her $100 in cash if she would swear that she gave the boy the liquor and not him. Mrs. Follin said she saw the money in Green's hand. She did not accept the bribe and was not called as a witness.

Vernon Follin, the boy's father, said that Patrick Green had been to his house and had told him and his wife "Now you got me into this, get me out or I'll get you."

Last night Donald Follin testified to the Justice that the true story of the affair was that he had purchased the liquor from Green.

AUTO TRANSPORTATION

Electric railway lines are discontinuing operation in all sections of the nation. Short spurs or "feed" lines of large steam railroad systems are being discarded both East and West. Accommodation and shuttle trains are either being reduced in number or abolished entirely on some railroads.

The motor truck and automobile are responsible. Highways are clogged with motor traffic, both freight and passenger. Naturally the steam and electric lines have suffered. The major portion of motor traffic is short distance and it is the short line railroad and interurban and suburban electric lines that have felt the competition most keenly. In the cities private automobiles, buses and taxicabs seriously menace the very existence of the trolley lines.

It is not to be inferred that the rail companies are surrendering without a struggle. On the contrary, they are fighting every inch of the way. In those states having public utilities bodies every move to establish motor transport lines is opposed by the parallel steam or electric lines.

Eventually gasoline, steam and electricity must recognize the inevitable and discontinue their inter-circuit warfare. The steam and electric lines should withdraw from the field of the truck and passenger automobile and the latter should recognize the natural province of the rail lines. Gasoline, sooner or later, will rule the city street and the short freight route. The steam railroad will remain the most efficient method of long distance transportation.

The refining process through which rail and gasoline are now passing is the application of the law of the survival of the fittest to transportation. The truck and passenger automobile have proven their commercial superiority to rail transportation. The railroad has no equal in long distance transportation.

CAGE THE DEFECTIVES

Charges of experts on mental diseases that the country is overrun with mental defectives who are potential "killers" seem to be corroborated by the murder of the Los Angeles school girl and two other similar killings within the same fortnight.

The thought that there are hundreds and even thousands of lunatics and half-wits at large, any one of whom may be suddenly seized with the desire to kill, is not reassuring to normal persons, especially parents of small children, but there is no cause for hysteria in the situation.

Until society places and keeps under restraint all such unfortunate human life will be insecure. The situation is too serious to permit sentiment to interfere with its correction. True, it is hard to separate the mentally defective from their relatives and to place them behind stone walls, but the anguish and sorrow thus caused is as nothing compared with that of the relatives of the maniac's victims.

Society will not permit the state to impose capital punishment on the insane murderer but in the future it will insist more than ever on the confinement of the mentally irresponsible.

Some of these song hits should have missed.

The only arguments some people listen to are their own.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beautiful orphan, who is coveted by hideous Count Ravoire. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoire. She rejoins Fabien, and they live so extravagantly that Fabien is forced to capitalize a genius for cards. The King plays Fabien at cards for Manon, accuses him of cheating. Manon is deported. Fabien miraculously escapes, swims to her ship. They are found by the officers.

Fabien's face hardened. It was as though he raised a mask to hide the tumult of emotions and dread that might betray his fear.

"Your pardon, sir, but she is my wife," Fabien's arm moved protectively around her.

Synnelet was amazed. His little dream of love was shattered. Besides, it was exceedingly upsetting to be balked in something on which he had set his heart and mind. The Governor frowned ominously and even the Captain looked a little worried. This calm announcement of Fabien's put altogether a different light on things. Manon, trembling in the shelter of Fabien's arms, gazed up at him adoringly, while he calmly continued to regard the others.

The Captain and the Governor turned aside and whispered in an undertone. It was evident that they were not entirely in accord.

"Put him off the ship," said the Governor in a voice loud enough for Fabien to hear.

"Yes," chimed in Synnelet, "we insist that you send him ashore."

"Are you sure that you will never want to change your mind?" Fabien paused long enough to search Manon's eyes for the answer he wanted. "Because just ahead of us, perhaps a day's sail—is a new country and we do not know what awaits us there. For my part, I do not mind. There was no future for us in France and your very touch makes me happy and is more priceless than gold."

"Then you shall be the richest man in the world. I love you with a tenderness that will last until death."

"My dear!" Fabien covered her slim hands with his own and continued, fervently, "Manon, will you start this new life of ours as my wife?"

With radiant face Manon turned toward him, then as suddenly averted her head, covering it with her hands. Fabien tightly touched her shoulder in alarm, not daring to speak. His fears were allayed, however as Manon slowly looked up with her beautiful eyes swimming in unshed tears and said:

"I have dreamed of it—oh, so many times—but never spoke—afraid I would degrade you—that I was not worthy of you—"

"Not worthy, my sweet one," returned Fabien. "It is I who am not worthy of you. Your sweetness and your love have been a haven of rest and comfort to me." Tenderly he held her to him, her head against his shoulder.

"Oh, no, Fabien. That is not true. However, it is good of you to say it. I know that I have not merited the almost incredible fidelity which you have given me and even while loving you I have caused you many annoyances that only your wonderful love could forgive. But now it seems that my very nature is altered. The tears that you have so frequently seen me shed were not tears of misfortune. I have wept unceasingly from the tenderness and compassion that I feel for you; and I shall never cease to unburden myself for all the sacrifices and terrible things that you have endured for me."

"Manon, sweetheart, it has been worth it. And now—when shall we be married? Will you come with me now to the Captain? He shall be able to land in this new country as we should."

"Yes, Fabien darling—anything you say. I want to be truly your wife." Manon was eager and thrilled at Fabien's suggestion.

This new idea, this great adventure—marriage—brought more wonderful thoughts of joy and anticipation than either of them had before experienced.

Gulleless as two children they made their way aft, hand in hand, to the Captain's cabin.

Fabien knocked at the cabin door and a gruff voice said, "Come in."

"If you please, Monsieur—will you marry us?" Fabien's voice faltered slightly and he had an uncomfortable feeling that all was not well.

Mrs. Maurice Heltzer, of Cedar street, Bristol, spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Charles Breece, of Riverview avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Greenhalge, of Philadelphia, were Monday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Michel, of Radcliffe street.

ALL SET FOR LE WITH CHAMPION

y Davis J. Walsh
N. S. Sports Editor
ORK, Jan. 6.—Tommy champion, and Leo Lomski, will meet tonight in a nd bout at Madison Square

Garden for the world's light heavyweight championship.

This simply worded paragraph tells a story without amplification and embellishment, therefore it tells almost nothing. It takes no cognizance, for example, of the fact that a great fight not only is in prospect but also that,
seemingly, a great fight is inevitable.
It doesn't tell of the fact that both of the principals feel they are on their way to bigger and finer things like the heavyweight championship and that they regard tonight's activities as the first, and therefore the most important step toward achieving the ambition in question. It doesn't say that Loughran is a fighting champion or that Lomski is the most worthy of challengers.
It is the skimmed milk of what probably will be a rather frothy occasion.

For all anyone knows at this premature moment, either or both of the principals can hold his own with all the heavyweights in the land. That is the way they are figuring it, anyhow, and so they will eye one another tonight from opposite corners with their calculating appraisal that is the tacit admiration of one fighting man for another.

They think so well of themselves, indeed, that both are conniving toward one end, namely, that they may win so decisively that they will be able to take the play away from the Sharkey-Heeney winner the following week.
Only one of them, perforce, can do this and the sharpshooters say that he will be Loughran. Anyhow, the champion remains a receding favorite at odds of 6 to 5 and, if you don't think the lads are reaching for their leather on this one, then you don't know that Chateau Thierry isn't a scientific conjecture.

They are betting plenty, in fact, and the house is a virtual sell out, so great is public interest in the proceedings.
The bout didn't need any smoke-up.
Loughran and Lomski attended to that themselves and in person. Tommy's dazzling performance with Slattery and Leo's winning starts against Tony Laurie, Maxey Rosenbloom and Yale Loughran, the customers on the dead run.

They think they are due to see something and they will if they aren't stone blind. Lomski has the entire East on a lead chain as the result of his busy, bustling, battering style and Loughran's disposition to fight any one any time has made its play for regular appeal. Then again, it will be match between a good fighter and a good boxer and that combination seldom fails to click.

Altogether, the affair looks so promising on paper that some of the boys are recalling the famous Stanley Ketchel-Thomas middleweight championship fight in California and telling their readers, both of them, that Loughran and Lomski will re-enact that classic drama. However, there is no state law demanding that you believe that one, Loughran, seemingly, is a fast boxer without a punch.
Lomski is a good fighter without too much tragedy in his gloves. The result is understood to have broken his arm counting over the knockdowns in the Ketchel-Thomas fight.

As a matter of fact, Ketchel's competitive ghost wouldn't have been exhumed at all if it wasn't for the fact that Lomski is a Pol, too. They had thought up about everything else to say about Leo, including the bestial of titles like the Aberdeen Assassin and the pelting Pole, and were just about typographically speechless, when some one recollected that the distance from pole to pole is 12,000 miles as the crow flies and twenty years as the clock turns. Anyhow, they are trying to make a Ketchel out of Lomski, which is a good trick even if you can't do it.

Lomski, however, has a great chance tonight. He is favored by the distance, being a body puncher and featuring almost unlimited stamina.

Loughran has even a greater chance.
He is favored by nature and the old girl seldom goes wrong.

STATE NEWS

HARRISBURG, Jan. 6 (I.N.S.)—The bureau of workmen's compensation received reports of 160,734 accidents involving a time loss of 2 days or more during 1927. W. H. Horner, the director, announced today. Of that number 2,064 were fatal cases.

The totals for the past year as compared with 1926 show a decrease of 10.9 per cent.

Coal mining remained the most hazardous occupation in the number of fatal accidents reported. Anthracite mining took a toll of 502 lives and bituminous 389 during the year. There were 26,817 non-fatal accidents reported from the anthracite fields and 23,267 from the bituminous.

On a hazard basis manufacturing came next to mining with a total of 400 fatal accidents, many of which were of minor character.

During the year compensation payments were authorized in 74,886 cases, involving a compensation liability of $13,342,453. Of the total payments
$5,772,569 was awarded in fatal cases and $3,226,464 in permanent disability.

At the close of the year the records in the bureau showed an outstanding liability and permanent disability cases amounting to $41,447,508. Under the provisions of the law these unpaid obligations are to be made in weekly installments extending over a number of years.

Of this of the bureau estimate that he amendments to the compensation act which reduce the waiting period when compensation payments begin from ten to seven days will increase the compensable cases approximately twenty per cent.

Records of the bureau show that in the 2001 fatal cases in which settlements have been reached the sole beneficiaries in 410 of the cases were widows, in 19 cases fathers, mothers in 99 cases and fathers and mothers in 117 cases. In 645 cases there were no minor dependents.

LEWISTOWN, Pa., Jan. 6 (I.N.S.)—
When the early settlers first set foot in Mifflin county's virgin woods they found less game there than now abounds in the region, natives here believe.

Thanks to restocking and the care
given the region by the State game commission, almost limitless game yearly awaits the army of big game hunters who flock to the region. It is estimated that 507 deer were killed legally in Mifflin county during the recent 15-day open season.

Dodge Brothers Victory Six Chassis Showing How the Flooring
Is Actually a Bracing for the Frame

A BRIEF HISTORY OF A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

IN THE Spring of 1925 Dodge Brothers undertook an important and gigantic task—which is now complete.

Since its inception in 1914 Dodge Brothers had specialized exclusively in a four-cylinder product. During thirteen years more than two million units of that product were sold to America and to the world.

It is unnecessary here to comment on the singular merits of that famous Four.

It was honored on the battlefields of war, and achieved equal distinction on the highways and byways of peace.

Its long life and complete dependability had become an adage.

Meanwhile, however, times were changing and tastes were changing with them.

While still as important as ever, dependability alone was no longer sufficient.

Greater speed and comfort, more style and luxury were the growing prepossessions of the hour.

Two years ago Dodge Brothers appraised its task and embarked upon a program designed to place it and its Dealer Organization in a position on January 1, 1928, second to none in the industry.

The astonishing results of this great achievement are now known to the world.

It is doubtful if industrial annals can cite, over a similar period, an achievement so outstanding.

A smart, swift, low-priced and immensely popular quality Four has replaced its famous predecessor.

The Senior Six, outstanding in performance, quality and luxurious appointment, has been created.

Graham Brothers Trucks and Motor Coaches (formerly exclusively Fours) have been supplemented by sixes. Fifty new types have been added. The capacities are broadened to range from one-half ton to two-ton, all resulting in the most complete and capable line of work cars known, and with prices ranging from $670 to $4290.

Then Thursday came The Victory—a Six for $1045 and up—the most spectacular engineering achievement of the decade.

These accomplishments, one following the other in steady progression, have now provided Dodge Brothers Dealers throughout the world with the most diversified and comprehensive line of passenger and commercial vehicles ever manufactured and sold by a single organization.

For every need and purse there is now a Dodge Brothers vehicle built dependably and in full recognition of the progressive ideals of today and tomorrow.

Adhering rigidly to the sound and honorable standards of a great past, Dodge Brothers have met the challenge of a still more exacting future.

AUTO TRANSPORTATION

Electric railway lines are discontinuing operation in all sections of the nation. Short spur or "feed" lines of large steam railroad systems are being discarded both East and West. Accommodation and shuttle trains are either being reduced in number or abolished entirely on some railroads.

The motor truck and automobile are responsible. Highways are clogged with motor traffic, both freight and passenger. Naturally the steam and electric lines have suffered. The major portion of motor traffic is short distance and it is the short line railroad and interurban and suburban electric lines that have felt the competition most keenly. In the cities private automobiles, buses and taxicabs seriously menace the very existence of the trolley lines.

It is not to be inferred that the rail companies are surrendering without a struggle. On the contrary, they are fighting every inch of the way. In those states having public utilities bodies every move to establish motor transport lines are opposed by the parallel steam or electric lines.

Eventually gasoline, steam and electricity must recognize the inevitable and discontinue their inter-city warfare. The steam and electric lines should withdraw from the field of the truck and passenger automobile and the latter should recognize the natural province of the rail lines. Gasoline, sooner or later, will rule the city street and the short freight route. The steam railroad will remain the most efficient method of long distance transportation.

The refining process through which rail and gasoline are now passing is the application of the law of the survival of the fittest to transportation. The truck and passenger automobile have proven their commercial superiority to rail transportation. The railroad has no equal in long distance transportation.

CAGE THE DEFECTIVES

Charges of experts on mental diseases that the country is overrun with mental defectives who are potential "killers" seem to be corroborated by the murder of the Los Angeles school girl and two other similar killings within the same fortnight.

The thought that there are hundreds and even thousands of lunatics and half-wits at large, any one of whom may be suddenly seized with the desire to kill, is not reassuring to normal persons, especially parents of small children, but there is no cause for hysteria in the situation.

Until society places and keeps under restraint all such unfortunate human life will be insecure. The situation is too serious to permit sentiment to interfere with its correction. True, it is hard to separate the mentally defective from their relatives and to place them behind stone walls, but the anguish and sorrow thus caused is as nothing compared with that of the relatives of the maniac's victims.

Society will not permit the state to impose capital punishment on the insane murderer but in the future it will insist more than ever on the confinement of the mentally irresponsible.

Some of these song hits should have missed.

The only arguments some people listen to are their own.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beautiful orphan, who is coveted by hideous Count Ravois. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravois. She rejoins Fabien, and they live so extravagantly that Fabien is forced to capitalize a genius for cards. The King plays Fabien at cards for Manon, accuses him of cheating. Manon is deported. Fabien miraculously escapes, swims to her ship. They are found by the officers.

Fabien's face hardened. It was as though he raised a mask to hide the tumult of emotions and dread that might betray his fear.

"Your pardon, sir, but she is my wife."

Fabien's arm moved protectively around her. Synnelet was amazed. His little dream of love was shattered. Besides, it was exceedingly upsetting to be balked in something on which he had set his heart and mind. The Governor frowned ominously and even the Captain looked a little worried. This calm announcement of Fabien's put altogether a different light on things. Manon trembled in the shelter of Fabien's arms, gazed up at him adoringly, while he calmly continued to regard the others.

The Captain and the Governor turned aside and whispered in an undertone. It was evident that they were not entirely in accord.

"Put him off the ship," said the Governor in a voice loud enough for Fabien to hear.

"Yes," chimed in Synnelet, "we insist that you send him ashore."

"If you please, Monsieur—will you marry us?"

Turn him over to the guards. It is evident that he is wanted by them."

The Captain looked back at the fast receding shore line, already more than a mile away. There was a humorous gleam in his eyes which did not escape Manon and Fabien, who had been awaiting the result of the conference with no little trepidation.

"It will be rather difficult walking, sir," said the Captain to the Governor. "Besides, the law permits a husband to accompany his wife. If the guards wanted this man badly enough they should have gotten him. For the moment we will do nothing about it."

The Governor frowned. He could not interfere upon the Captain's authority. From time immemorial, at sea, the word of the Captain has been law for all on board to obey.

Synnelet, headstrong and impetuous, started to protest, but a quick word of caution from his uncle effectively silenced him.

The Captain waited another moment for a coherent voiced dissent to his verdict, then, as every one remained silent, he turned to Fabien and said, "You heard what I said, Monsieur? For the time being you are to remain on board—you will work your way across."

Manon's and Fabien's eyes met in a frantic effort to convey their relief, their love, and their hope for continued good luck in the new land that was destined to be their future home.

CHAPTER XXIII

The days that followed opened up a new life for Fabien. The hard manual labor that befell his lot as a member of the ship's crew, combined with the bracing salt air and plain but wholesome food built him up physically and gave him a keen mental stimulation that was in direct contrast to the romantic, inactive student who had studied for the priesthood.

Fabien's one regret was that his moment's with Manon were altogether too few and too far apart. His duties did not permit otherwise and all possible moments of leisure were eagerly sought for and anticipated by both.

Fabien was unwearied in his efforts to save Manon from every inconvenience. She knew this and her gratitude, together with an appreciation for the odd situation that Fabien had placed himself in for her sake, made her so tender, and attentive to his every desire that their moments together were a continual exchange of attentions and love.

These rare leisure moments usually occurred in the early evening when the deported women were allowed a few moments on the open deck before being locked in their quarters for the night.

Manon had won the fine old Captain's heart and respect. He deplored the fact that so charming a young girl had been deported. He was sure it was a mistake because such errors had been known to occur as the result of jealousy of someone in authority.

More than anything else the fine old seaman admired virtue and he was positive that Manon's sweet face reflected all the good qualities that a wife should possess.

Eight weeks of life aboard ship had slipped into the past. It was the longest and most tranquil period of that Manon and Fabien had ever had together.

One beautiful moonlight night they were on the forward deck while the ship, with all sails set, sailed straight into a great golden path of moonlight.

"No magic carpet could carry us on a happier journey!" sighed Manon contentedly as she nestled her head in the warm hollow of Fabien's shoulder. "It is a miracle that you eluded arrest and are here. I shall not mind living in America—or any place—with you!"

"Are you sure that you will never want to change your mind?" Fabien paused long enough to search Manon's eyes for the answer he wanted. "Because just ahead of us, perhaps a day's sail—is a new country and we do not know what awaits us there. For my part, I do not mind. There was no future for us in France and your very touch makes me happy and is more precious than gold."

"Then you shall be the richest man in the world. I love you with a tenderness that will last until death."

"My dear!" Fabien covered her slim hands with his own and continued, fervently, "Manon will you start this new life of ours as my wife?"

With radiant face Manon turned toward him, then as suddenly averted her head, covering it with her hands. Fabien lightly touched her shoulder in alarm, not daring to speak. His fears were allayed, however as Manon slowly looked up with her beautiful eyes swimming in unshed tears and said:

"I have dreamed of it—oh, so many times—but never spoke—afraid I would degrade you—that I was not worthy of you."

"Not worthy, my sweet one," returned Fabien. "It is I who am not worthy of you. Your sweetness and your love have been a haven of rest and comfort to me. Tenderly he held her to him, her head against his shoulder.

"Oh, no, Fabien. That is not true. However, it is good of you to say it. I know that I have not merited the almost incredible fidelity which you have given me and even while loving you I have caused you many annoyances that only your wonderful love could forgive. But now it seems that my very nature is altered. The tears that you have so gently seen me shed were not tears of misfortune. I have wept unselfishly from the tenderness and compassion that I feel for you, and I shall never cease to upbraid myself for all the sacrifices and terrible things that you have endured for me."

"Manon, sweetheart, it has been worth it. And now—when shall we be married? Will you come with me now to the Captain? He can marry us. He will—and we shall be able to land in this new country as we should."

"Yes, Fabien darling—anything you say. I want to be truly your wife." Manon was eager and thrilled at Fabien's suggestion.

This new idea, this great adventure—marriage—brought more wonderful thoughts of joy and anticipation than either of them had before experienced.

Gulleless as two children they made their way aft, hand in hand, to the Captain's cabin.

Fabien knocked at the cabin door and a gruff voice said, "Come in."

With his arm protectively around Manon he opened the door and entered. Before them, seated around the table were the Captain, the Governor and his nephew Synnelet. The Captain rose to his feet as they came slowly forward and inquired, "Well, what can I do for you?"

"If you please, Monsieur—will you marry us?" Fabien's voice faltered slightly and he had an uncomfortable feeling that all was not well.

LOMSKI ALL SET FOR BATTLE WITH CHAMPION

By David J. Walsh
I. N. S. Sports Editor
NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Tommy Loughran, champion, and Leo Lomski, challenger, will meet tonight in a fifteen round bout at Madison Square Garden for the world's light heavy-weight championship.

This simply worded paragraph tells a story without amplification and embellishment, therefore it tells almost nothing. It takes no cognizance, for example, of the fact that a great fight not only is in prospect but also that, seemingly, a great fight is inevitable. It doesn't tell of the fact that both of the principals feel they are on their way to bigger and finer things like the heavyweight championship and that they regard tonight's activities as the first, and therefore the most important step toward achieving the ambition in question. It doesn't say that Loughran is a fighting champion or that Lomski is the most worthy of challengers. It is the skimmed milk of what probably will be a rather frothy occasion.

For all anyone knows at this premature moment, either or both of the principals can hold his own with all the heavyweights in the land. That is the way they are figuring it, anyhow, and so they will eye one another tonight from opposite corners with their calculating appraisal that is the tacit admiration of one fighting man for another.

They think so well of themselves indeed, that both are conniving toward one end, namely, that they may win so decisively that they will be able to take the play away from the Sharkey-Henney winner the following week. Only one of them, perforce, can do this and the sharpshooters say that he will be Loughran. Anyhow, the champion remains a receding favorite at odds of 6 to 5 and, if you don't think the lads are reaching for their leather on this one, then you don't know that Chateau Thierry isn't a scientific conjecture.

They are betting plenty, in fact, and the house is a virtual sell out, so great is public interest in the proceedings. The bout didn't need any smoke-up. Loughran and Lomski attended to that themselves and in person. Tommy's dazzling performance with Slattery and Leo's winning starts against Tony Bourke, Maxey Rosenbloom and Yale Loughran have even a greater chance of winning the customers on the dead run.

They think they are due to see something and they will if they aren't stone blind. Lomski has the entire East on a lead chain as the result of his busy, bustling, battering style and Loughran's disposition to fight any one any time has made its play for similar effect. Then again, it will be match between a good fighter and a good boxer and that combination seldom fails to click.

Altogether, the affair looks so promising on paper that some of the boys are recalling the famous Stanley Ketchel-Joe Thomas middleweight championship fight in California and telling their readers, both of them, that Loughran and Lomski will reenact that classic drama. However, there is no state law demanding that you believe that one, Loughran, seemingly, is a fast boxer without a punch. Lomski is a good fighter without too much tragedy in his gloves. The referee is understood to have broken his arm counting over the knockdowns in the Ketchel-Thomas fight.

As a matter of fact, Ketchel's competitive ghost wouldn't have been exhumed at all if it wasn't for the fact that Lomski is a Pole, too. They had thought up about everything else to say about Leo, including the bestowal of titles like the Aberdeen Assassin and the pelting Pole, and were just about typographically speechless, when some one recollected that the distance from pole to pole is 12,000 miles as the crow flies and twenty years as the clock turns. Anyhow, they are trying to make a Ketchel out of Lomski, which is a good trick even if you can't do it.

Lomski, however, has a great chance tonight. He is favored by the distance, being a body puncher and featuring almost unlimited stamina. Loughran has even a greater chance. He is favored by nature and the old girl seldom goes wrong.

STATE NEWS

HARRISBURG, Jan. 6 (I.N.S.)—The bureau of workmen's compensation received reports of 160,734 accidents involving a time loss of 2 days or more during 1927. W. H. Horner, the director, announced today. Of that number 2,064 were fatal cases.

The totals for the past year as compared with 1926 show a decrease of 10.9 per cent.

Coal mining remained the most hazardous occupation in the number of fatal accidents reported. Anthracite mining took a toll of 502 lives and bituminous 389 during the year. There were 26,817 non-fatal accidents reported from the anthracite fields and 23,267 from the bituminous.

On a hazard basis manufacturing came next to mining with a total of 400 fatal accidents, many of which were of minor character.

During the year compensation payments were authorized in 74,386 cases, involving a compensation liability of $13,342,183. Of the total payments $5,772,869 was awarded in fatal cases and $3,226,464 in permanent disability.

At the close of the year the records in the bureau showed an outstanding liability and permanent disability cases amounting to $41,447,508. Under the provisions of the law these unpaid obligations are to be made in weekly installments extending over a number of years.

Of this of the bureau estimate that he amendments to the compensation act which reduce the waiting period when compensation payments begin from ten to seven days will increase the compensable cases approximately twenty per cent.

Records of the bureau show that in the 2,061 fatal cases in which settlements have been reached the sole beneficiaries in 410 of the cases were widows, in 19 cases fathers, mothers in 99 cases and fathers and mothers in 117 cases. In 645 cases there were no minor dependents.

LEWISTOWN, Pa., Jan. 6 (I.N.S.)—When the early settlers first set foot in Mifflin county's virgin woods they found less game there than now abounds in the region, natives here believe.

Thanks to restocking and the care given the region by the State game commission, almost limitless game yearly awaits the army of big game hunters who flock to the region. It is estimated that 507 deer were killed legally in Mifflin county during the recent 15-day open season.

Dodge Brothers Victory Six Chassis Showing How the Flooring Is Actually a Bracing for the Frame

A BRIEF HISTORY OF A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

IN THE Spring of 1925 Dodge Brothers undertook an important and gigantic task—which is now complete.

Since its inception in 1914 Dodge Brothers had specialized exclusively in a four-cylinder product. During thirteen years more than two million units of that product were sold to America and to the world.

It is unnecessary here to comment on the singular merits of that famous Four.

It was honored on the battlefields of war, and achieved equal distinction on the highways and byways of peace.

Its long life and complete dependability had become an adage.

Meanwhile, however, times were changing and tastes were changing with them.

While still as important as ever, dependability alone was no longer sufficient.

Greater speed and comfort, more style and luxury were the growing prepossessions of the hour.

Two years ago Dodge Brothers appraised its task and embarked upon a program designed to place it and its Dealer Organization in a position on January 1, 1928, second to none in the industry.

The astonishing results of this great achievement are now known to the world.

It is doubtful if industrial annals can cite, over a similar period, an achievement so outstanding.

A smart, swift, low-priced and immensely popular quality Four has replaced its famous predecessor.

The Senior Six, outstanding in performance, quality and luxurious appointment, has been created.

Graham Brothers Trucks and Motor Coaches (formerly exclusively Fours) have been supplemented by sixes. Fifty new types have been added. The capacities are broadened to range from one-half ton to two-ton, all resulting in the most complete and capable line of work cars known, and with prices ranging from $670 to $4290.

Then Thursday came The Victory—a Six for $1045 and up—the most spectacular engineering achievement of the decade.

These accomplishments, one following the other in steady progression, have now provided Dodge Brothers Dealers throughout the world with the most diversified and comprehensive line of passenger and commercial vehicles ever manufactured and sold by a single organization.

For every need and purse there is now a Dodge Brothers vehicle built dependably and in full recognition of the progressive ideals of today and tomorrow.

Adhering rigidly to the sound and honorable standards of a great past, Dodge Brothers have met the challenge of a still more exacting future.

It's a neighbor-maker

OVER in the bunkhouse the boys of the Bar-C outfit have Kansas City on the radio. In her Park Avenue apartment, the slim fingers of a famous actress turn the dials, and the same music leaps forth. Forty miles north of Milwaukee, Chris Jonsen, the dirt farmer, is listening in on the same wave-length.

The same sort of thing is going on everywhere, all over the country, at all hours of the day and night. Folks in Los Angeles see the same movies, and ride in the same automobiles that New Yorkers enjoy. The resident of Seattle wears the same sort of clothes, eats the same brand of bacon, and lives in the same kind of house as his neighbor in Portland, Maine.

Advertising has done it. Advertising, the miracle worker, keeps everyone in the land attuned to the latest in everything. It has changed the buying habits of a nation. It is the great modern force that makes neighbors of the people of far countries, that brings the best of their customs to us, and takes ours to them.

SANTA CLAUS OR WAS IT CUPID?
by HELEN GAISFORD

IT WAS Christmas Eve—quite the most glorious Christmas Eve Virginia Ray had ever known. Everything was ready for the party—her party—from the "Merry Christmas" place-cards to the splendid Christmas tree that would be ablaze all evening with little lights and colors.

Virginia pinned the last red stocking to the mantel, and turned to her mother. "I think it was real mean of George not to offer to play Santa Claus for me," she said. "After his having such a nice costume, too."

"But, dear," her mother answered. "How could he when you quarreled? I didn't know you had invited him."

"I didn't, but of course I would have, if he had been just the least bit nice," Virginia pouted, and hurried off to get ready to receive her guests. Her mother, busy with last-minute details, smiled in what might have been remembrance of her own youth. A few minutes later she went to the phone, held a brief conversation, and as she hung up the receiver she called up the stairs: "Hurry, dear. I do believe some of your guests are coming."

"I'll be right down," Virginia's voice preceded its owner by only a second. "Do I look all right, mother?"

"All right," said Mrs. Ray's voice, and her eyes said, "Lovely," and her heart said, "My own darling!"

Virginia, responding to an urgent burr-gg! admitted her earliest guests. Half an hour later, when the rooms were filled with merry, chattering young people, the orchestra struck up the first dance. Escorts led their laughing partners to the center of the floor, but Virginia did not dance the first number—she had not invited George. Neither had she invited, as her partner, anyone else.

That dance was over, and another, and another. The Christmas tree was admired; the mistletoe was found, and put to its proper use; occasional silences made clear the distant sound of carolers; the clock struck eleven—twelve.

At that moment the guests were surprised (and so was Virginia) by the sound of sleighbells, a hearty "Merry Christmas," and the appearance, from somewhere near the tree, of as jolly a Santa as one could imagine. Near beside him stood Mrs. Ray.

"Why, Mr. Santa Claus, I do believe," and then she presented him to the company. "My old childhood friend, Mr. Santa Claus, has come to pay us a visit, and as he is all loaded down with his various gifts, which must be delivered by tomorrow morning, I suggest that he give any of us who are to receive his attentions, our presents now."

"I didn't know, Virginia," said Pudgy Clark, the fat and awkward youth who had stepped on Virginia's toes during the last dance. "I didn't know you believed in Santa Claus."

"I don't!" Virginia snapped. "All right," he laughed, "you needn't bite my head off."

The favors distributed, Mrs. Ray called Virginia. "Here, dear, you and Santa lead the grand march. If you will all follow, I think we might find some refreshments in another room."

"Righto!" said Santa, in a decidedly unfrigid voice. Somehow, Santa knew just where to go. But then, of course, Santa Claus knows everything.

He even knew, a few moments later, when Virginia excused herself from the party, and slipped back to the other room, now in a state of partial disarray, and (for even the orchestra members were enjoying the repast in the other room) forlorn in its emptiness. Virginia was feeling particularly forlorn and particularly proud. Santa Claus must know everything, for he knew just how long to wait before he, too, wandered from the merry group and joined Virginia. And he (or was it Cupid?) knew just what to say to make this really the most wonderful Christmas Eve in all Virginia's life. Just what it was, I am not sure, but he must have told Virginia, for presently she said, "I know; I know," and she had cheered up quite a bit before he put his arm around her. Somehow she wasn't so forlorn—nor quite so proud.

After a while they walked over to the tree together, and they listened to the carolers; and then, somehow, they stopped right under the mistletoe! What George said was whispered in her ear, so she shall never know, but Virginia was laughing as she answered him.

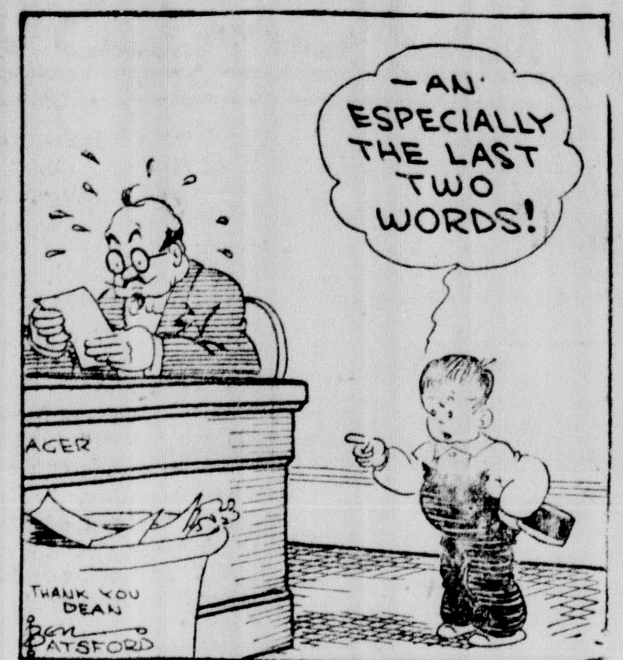

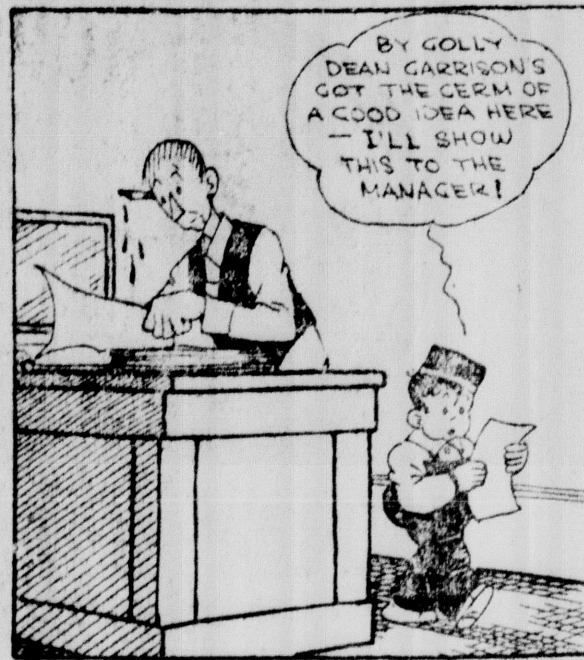

"Why, George," she said, "now dare you say I don't believe in Santa Claus?"

steel shell to form a double wall with an air space between. What automotive engineers graphically and untechnically describe as "tin-paunting" in all-steel body construction effectively has been suppressed by perforations and other sound-deadening devices; leaving, they assert, strength, lightness, appearance, and absence of rattles as a net gain.

The engine developed exclusively for the Victory Six is an L-head, medium duty type, with bore of 3 3/8 inches and stroke of 3 3/4 inches. Pistons are aluminum alloy. Seven bearings support the crank-shaft, which turns approximately 1,285 r. p. m. at 25 miles an hour and about 3,350 r. p. m. at 65 miles an hour. Because of rigid support and careful balancing of the 52 pound crankshaft, no counterweights or other vibration dampeners are used. Gearshift positions are S. A. E. standard; namely, lever to left end back for low and to right and back for high.

Four-wheel Lockheed hydraulic footbrakes expand internally against a drum 12 inches in diameter. The parking brake contracts on the propeller shaft.

The entire passenger car production of Dodge Brothers, in all three models, will be supplied in wide varieties of color combinations.

The public is invited to inspect the Dodge car now on display at the showroom of the Percy G. Ford Motor Co., 1776 Farragut avenue.
